

CONICAL, THREADED SUBTALAR IMPLANT

ABSTRACT

A medical implant includes a body having a conical portion and adapted for implantation into a person's body. A plurality of threads formed around an exterior
5 surface of the conical portion of the body are adapted to help secure the implant in place within the person's body.